He is up at dawn every morning and has always led a busy life, not overstrained with work, allowing nothing to depress him or retard him in the realization of his plans in life. This, together with a wise temperance, is the secret of the prolongation of his days. In his age he is probably more entitled to the cognomen of "Extra Billy" than in his prime, when it was a name by which he was known all over the United States. From an early period in this century the

His only daughter presides over his delightful home with pleasing grace, and extends to a host of friends an elegant hospitality. She associates with the care of her father's declining years a sad watching over the graves and memories of the Confederate dead. Colonel Thomas Smith and Caplain Frederick Smith are the only sons surviving. The latter lives in New Mexico, and is very prominent in that territory. Colonel Thomas Smith is a leading lawver of the Warrenton bar, and the recent and prospective delegate in the Virginia Legislature from Londoun and Fauquier. He ure from Loudoun and Fauquier. He was a great pet of General Early's during was a great pet of General Early's during the war. He had a splendid regiment, made so by his discipline. It is claimed for him that he saved Early's army at Fisher's Hill, and his regiment never broke, and kept Eirly's rear intact until he could rally his routed troops. Colonel Smith's commission as brigadier-general was made out at the time of the surrender. He, a few years ago, fought Elam, editor of the Richmond Whig, in a duel near Richmond, wounding Elam in the mouth at the first fire. at the first fire.

James Caleb Smith, who went to Cali

Governor Smith and his son became at once prominent leaders in the Democratic party of California. James Caleb Smith became involved in a duel with Senator Broderick. The duel took place at Sacramento and was witnessed by 5,000 people, Governor Smith being one of the spectators. According to the rules of the code, each were to surrender all articles from their pockets. Broderick, drawing his watch from his fob pocket, ofbred to surrender that fornia with his father, the ex-Governor his fob pocket, offered to surrender that if Smith so desired, but, Smith intimating that it was immaterial, Broderick restored it to his fob. Smith put four balls through Broderick's watch and cut the chain with another. Smith was untouched and Broderick uninjured. Query: which of these was the superior mind? The husband's probably. Truth or falsehood was nothing to the woman. Consider this! [Then in different ink, evidently written at a later period.] The man was incumbered with love of truth. A woman sitting working was told by another woman, in course of conversation, that the man she loved was going to marry another woman. She betrayed no emotion, but her feet and hands turned cold; she stitched on—the other lady went. She sat and worked on for two hours, unconscious of the flight of time. Fact, communicated by Mrs. Seymour. I think I know the woman.—Hopley thrashes his pupil, Master Changellor, for two hours, and kills him. Mrs. Hopley, witz 34, aldah him to conceal the murder; long stockings, white gloves, dodgee originating with her. Hence one who confounds her sex with ours would infer abe is a view woman. Aurora Borealis appeared; at any rate, there was not a single clear evening when it was absent. Some times it filled the whole sky; often its displays were confined to insignificant and faint phenomens, low in the north, just like those observed in Southern Scandinavia; but some times they attained a-msgnificence which defled description. He came to the conclusion that the great many different forms might certainly be reduced to a few simple ones. In most instances the Aurora forms belts, or zones, which stretch across the earth in the direction of the magnetic east-west, which zones are formed by a congiomerawhich zones are formed by a conglomera tion of thin sheets of luminous matter ranged one behind the other, their di rection being parallel with the inclination needle. Medical.

Dr. J. E. SMITH. No. 1404 Chapline Street.

The best evidence of a physician's success is the testimony of his patients. The increasing demands for professional services prove that have dealt honorably and fairly with those who have consulted me. I never use a patient's name without permission, though I have many hondred contidents from those whom I have come after they had been premounced increase and after they had been premounced in the property of the patients and familiarity with theraptic species, a close observance of temperamental profilerities and strict attention to hygienic ganagement insures success, a cure is possible, and I frankly give the patients my opinion.
